

GIRL SCOUTS

Cookie time is here

You've waited a year and now Girl Scout cookie time is here. Proceeds help fund Lincoln Girl Scout activities, including community service projects.

"Troops sell cookies through door-to-door individual orders or by setting up a booth and selling the cookies on the spot," explains Barbara Rhines, Service Unit Coordinator for the Lincoln Girl Scouts. "You can also visit our new Lincoln Girl Scout website, lincolnmagirlscouts.com to place an order or find out the location of an upcoming booth sale."

Boxes are $4 each and include perennial favorites, such as thin mints and peanut butter patties. The girls will also be accepting cookie order donations to send to military units abroad.

"The cookies make great holiday gifts and also freeze well, so you can stock up on your favorites," Rhines adds. "The Girl Scout cookie sale is a tradition that benefits people's sweet tooth but more importantly benefits these service-minded young girls."
